In a liquid crystal display device, a classification based on an operating mode for liquid crystals includes a phase change (PC) mode, a twisted nematic (TN) mode, a super twisted nematic (STN) mode, an electrically controlled birefringence (ECB) mode, an optically compensated bend (OCB) mode, an in-plane switching (IPS) mode, a vertical alignment (VA) mode and a polymer sustained alignment (PSA) mode. A classification based on a driving mode in the device includes a passive matrix (PM) and an active matrix (AM). The PM is further classified into static, multiplex and so forth, and the AM is classified into a thin film transistor (TFT), a metal insulator metal (MIM) and so forth. The TFT is further classified into amorphous silicon and polycrystal silicon. The latter is classified into a high temperature type and a low temperature type according to a production process. A classification based on a light source includes a reflection type utilizing natural light, a transmission type utilizing a backlight and a semi-transmission type utilizing both natural light and a backlight. These devices contain a liquid crystal composition having suitable characteristics. The liquid crystal composition has a nematic phase. General characteristics of the composition should be improved to give an AM device having good general characteristics. Table 1 below summarizes a relationship between two of the general characteristics. The general characteristics of the composition will be explained further based on a commercially available AM device. A temperature range of the nematic phase relates to a temperature range in which the device can be used. A preferred maximum temperature of the nematic phase is 70° C. or higher and a preferred minimum temperature of the nematic phase is -10° C. or lower. A viscosity of the composition relates to a response time in the device. A short response time is preferred for displaying moving images on the device. Accordingly, a small viscosity in the composition is preferred. A small viscosity at a low temperature is further preferred. TABLE 1

General Characteristics of Composition	General Characteristics of AM Device
1wide temperature range	Wide usable temperature range
2nematic phase	two or more
3small viscosity	1short response time
4suitable optical anisotropy	3suitable optical anisotropy
5large contrast ratio	4suitable optical isotropy

Developmental modifications in androgen receptor-mediated transcription in brain and peripheral tissues of male and female mice. The androgen receptor (AR) is thought to be responsible for the masculinizing effects of androgens on the developing brain. The objective of this work was to examine the time-course of AR-mediated transcription in several different organs of male and female mice from birth to adulthood. MCF-7 cells were used to study androgen action at the molecular level. AR expression in intact male, female, and immature female mice was measured by AR immunohistochemistry at different times during pre- and postnatal development. AR-positive cells were visualized with a monoclonal antibody to the AR and with an antibody to estrogen receptor alpha. The AR was found to be consistently expressed in male mice in the brain, liver, and skin, and weakly expressed in the uterus, epididymis, and testis. No significant differences were noted between male and female mice in levels of AR immunostaining or mRNA in these organs. In contrast, AR expression was much higher in the testis of immature female mice than in adult males. AR mRNA was also highly expressed in MCF-7 cells. Interestingly, AR immunoreactivity decreased by 20% in the epididymis, uterus, and skin of male mice after puberty (45 days of age). These data are in agreement with an involvement of AR in the sexual differentiation of the brain and other peripheral tissues in male mice. Furthermore, we suggest that this putative role in postnatal life may be limited to the male gender. and change the output as required. You could get a z-wave universal controller like the CC1100 with an output from 2 to 12 volts direct current (VDC) using multiple output switches to select which connection you wish to use. This gives you a lot of flexibility as you can use it as a simple power switch or use a multi-output switch to power loads like track lighting, fans, etc. Depending on the loads you wish to power, you may need to add a power distribution unit (PDU) to do this. Then you can use this as an intelligent switch or add a relay module to power a pool light. The magic of the CC1100 is that you can connect it to a wall switch and use the room's lights as a trigger to turn on/off the connected loads. Another reason to use the CC1100 is that it can be extended to add a power meter and set limits
