Documentary: In 2015, Northern California experienced a devastating series of wildfires that destroyed thousands of lives and homes as well as many precious photographs and personal items. The fires burned long and hot - even those of the photos from S.P.O.R.E were not spared. In the wake of these disasters, the ruins of many homes were left with little to no photographic and personal items left behind. For many, the fires became something that they had to overcome to rebuild and move on with their lives, leaving them heartbroken and with a hole in their hearts. This documentary is a series of photographs and personal items left behind by people after the devastating fires. It is a celebration of all the photographs of life that were not consumed by fire. - The "S.P.O.R.E." logo was created by Martin Munkaci. All rights reserved. ===== A: The serial number looks like it should be able to be extracted by any respectable hex editor. But, I'd probably recommend re-using the SHUTIL serial number tool because it has been tuned for years to do this, which is a pain. The serial number is the bizos.txt file created when you installed iTunes. open up terminal and type in shutil -spi bizos.txt And the result is the 6 digit serial number that will probably be in a file named "bizos.txt" somewhere on your hard drive. I think you can reverse the process, but it's a little tricky. I'd probably just copy the entire contents of that file, insert it into your file, and re-run the whole process. Here is a tool for doing all this: But the result is the same... You have to write all the data into a file, then copy the file into iTunes, and just re-run the original installer. To copy the contents of the file - cd to the location where iTunes is installed on your computer. - Type copy /y c:\users\(username)\appdata\local\itunes\shim.itunesrepair\bizos.txt C:\temp Note: The "C:\temp" will need to have the same path as the original bizos.txt file for some reason. Subdural empyema associated with atlanto-occipital joint subluxation. A case report. A case of atlanto-occipital subluxation and subdural empyema is described in a 25-year-old man who had a history of splenectomy and bony erosion of the posterior vertebral column. A review of the literature revealed that a subdural empyema may be associated with a variety of anatomical abnormalities of the posterior elements of the craniocervical junction, including: empyema associated with os odontoideum, herniation of the posterior arch of C1 into the epidural space, fibrocartilaginous bands extending from the atlas to the occipital bone, and traumatic tapering of C1 and formation of a 3e33713323
