In a recent draft statement, EU states called on Israel to end the practice of settler violence and to compensate Palestinians. The EU foreign policy chief Federica Mogherini announced last week that EU states will be called on to condemn Israeli "settlement policy" and violence against Palestinians. According to Mogherini, the statement aims to step up the pressure on Israel to end the situation. The statement, which still needs to be endorsed by the European Council and the European Parliament, "should be considered a reflection of the increasingly strong consensus" among EU member states, Mogherini said, Reuters reported. EU Commission President Jean-Claude Juncker is said to be of the opinion that EU states should endorse the statement, though a final decision has not yet been made. "In recent weeks, we have witnessed increased violence and settlement construction, which must be condemned by all," Mogherini said. Mogherini said that they were also asking Israel to "ensure that the freedom of movement and security of Palestinians is fully respected," the AP reported. The foreign policy chief reiterated the EU's "full support" for the Middle East peace process, and added that the European Union "will do everything in its power" to make the process "successful." In December, the UNHRC said that Israel was guilty of a "flagrant and systematic attack" on Palestinians, after the agency found that Israel committed crimes against humanity in the occupied territories. According to the UNHRC, Israel has been repeatedly implicated of committing crimes against humanity and war
