Query Express uses OLEDB to enable users to query from most any database that supports OLE DB, including Microsoft SQL Server. Installation Query Express can be downloaded from the Query Express site. Usage The main screen is as follows: Selecting a Database from the list on the left shows the SQL Select statement required to run a query against that database: The Query dialog box allows the user to edit the SQL Statement and preview it. In addition, Query Express will show the relationship between the tables and where the constraints are. Limitations Query Express is based on Microsoft's OLE DB provider for SQL Server and is only OLE DB compatible. It cannot query Microsoft SQL Server using native SQL (i.e., it can't create and drop indexes, add or delete columns, etc.).

The present invention relates to a process for catalytically reacting isoprene with itself or an isoprene-containing stream to obtain a compound containing a thermodynamically stable tertiary butyl group. Isoprene is produced by steam cracking of naphtha in a gas generator. The isoprene may be reacted with itself to produce cumene or with an isopropyl-substituted aromatic compound, such as isobutylbenzene, to produce a polymer referred to as poly(p-methylstyrene). Isobutene is formed when isoprene reacts with itself and this isobutene may be reacted with itself to form tertiary butyl alcohol. Tertiary butyl alcohol is readily used as a gasoline additive and is used primarily as a comonomer in the manufacture of synthetic oil. Tertiary butyl alcohol is also a very useful chemical. Various methods are known for the production of tertiary butyl alcohol, including those disclosed in U.S. Pat. No. 3,322,815 and U.S. Pat. No. 4,297,712. These patents disclose a process for producing tertiary butyl alcohol which comprises passing a stream of compressed air through a catalyst system comprising a supported acidic crystalline aluminosilicate having a three dimensional structure of mordenite type and having a surface area within the range of 30 to 500 m²/g, a silica to alumina

Keymacro is an OLE-DB parameter sniffer that intercepts parameter declarations for stored procedure invocations, obtains the substituted values, and returns the substituted parameter values to the caller. Keymacro is the only tool of its kind that can sniff stored procedure invocations and returns the substituted values for parameters used as input data. Keymacro can also view which value has been substituted for parameters and which parameters are optional. Keymacro supports both OleDB and ADO. It intercepts all of the parameters for a stored procedure and returns their values to the caller, even those with default values. The application can then store the parameters and their values in a file or in a table in the database. Keymacro also provides a wizard that lets users add the database connection information for a stored procedure. When a stored procedure is invoked, Keymacro intercepts the parameters and returns the substituted values to the caller. Keymacro also intercepts the first set of parameters in the stored procedure. Keymacro is part of the Keymacro Product Suite, which includes various tools such as Keymacro DataView, Keymacro CodeView, Keymacro Query List and Keymacro Keyboard. An example of Keymacro Keyboard is how to perform a Google search by just typing keywords into the tool. Features:

To begin with, let's talk about the nature of this game and how it intends to utilize the blockchain technology. Looking at Stellar Dawn, the game is very similar to a typical MMORPG. Players can have individual alt accounts in addition to the main account, and play a variety of activities from questing, crafting, PvP, or even player trading. All those activities can be done with in-game assets (currency). One of the main concepts of Stellar Dawn is giving players ownership of in-game assets. This means that players can get the
