IDM Backup Manager is a lightweight backup alternative for profiles stored inside Internet Download Manager (IDM for short) that can also clean up your IDM configuration. It's a recommendable choice for IDM users, seeing as backup and restore operations are made available as one-click operations. It also benefits from a toolset for removing unnecessary IDM data. IDM Backup Manager is presented inside a tiny interface, without eye candying elements, but it is intuitive nonetheless. It goes straight to the point by providing a few backup options directly in the main GUI. Because it automatically detects IDM installations, it only requires that you select the output folder for the backups that will be generated and provides a few extras for advanced users. If you go for the full backup, then all of the IDM data, including downloads, scheduler, grabber, history and logs, will be backed up automatically. Alternatively, the custom mode allows you to make a selection of the items enumerated above. You can also password protect the output backup file, as well as to select one of the available compression methods (the process can be done without compression at all, but in order to gain space you can opt for a range of scenarios, from normal to ultra – which is the ultimate level of compression).

Depending on the size of your IDM data, the duration of the backup process can vary. In case you want to perform a restore process, you will be required to provide the path to the backup file, as well as the password you used for protecting the file (if any). The cleaning toolset provides utilities for removing obsolete data from IDM, including login passwords. All in all, IDM Backup Manager helps you to build a backup solution for situations where you want to restore IDM to a previous configuration without using complex backup software. Q: What are the different color options for the default browser? I'm trying to replace the current browser with Chromium and installed it as a user agent, but I can't figure out how to change the color scheme. I know the color scheme is customizable in other applications, such as the GNOME Shell and the software center. However, I would like to customize it for Chromium since its default theme is pretty ugly. I have looked through the settings and Chromium's appearance settings, but I can't seem to find a way to change it. A: I just found out how to do it.

KeyMACRO is a unique, powerful utility, for Windows systems, that enables you to rapidly and easily create HEX/

ASCII/BIN/TXT/EBCDIC keyboard macros, and then assign them to different hotkeys for both standard and custom keyboards.

KeyMACRO is a totally graphical application, it has two main windows, the left side provides the keyboard user interface, and the right side is where the keyboard shortcuts are defined. From the left window, you can create new keyboard shortcuts (using the “+” button), edit existing ones (using the “Edit” button), find existing shortcuts (using the “Find” button), remove a shortcut (using the “Remove” button), assign a new shortcut to an existing key (using the “Assign” button), add or edit the text, and click on the “Save” button. You can also perform a “Keystrokes List” using the “List” button. Besides, you can also edit the text inside the right window. You can also view and create the HEX/ASCII/BIN/TXT/EBCDIC keyboard shortcuts, as well as assign them to other hotkeys. The “Keystrokes” panel, in the left window, provides a graphical representation of the selected keyboard shortcut, as well as the Hex/ASCII/BIN/TXT/EBCDIC values assigned to it. You can also search for existing shortcuts in the list by typing text in the “Search” field. You can also change the Hex/ASCII/BIN/TXT/EBCDIC characters assigned to the shortcut, as well as add some characters at the end (using the “Add” button), remove some characters at the end (using the “Remove” button), and change the text assigned to the shortcut (using the “Edit” button). You can also edit the keystroke hotkey, using the “Modify” button, or assign the hotkey to a different hotkey, using the “Assign” button. Additionally, you can also perform a “Keystrokes List” using the “List” button. You can also export the shortcuts to the clipboard (using the “Copy” button). You can also set a keyboard shortcut and
