Build 16.0.1, 16.0.1.133, 16.0.1.177.COLORADO SPRINGS, Colo. - For the second time this spring, the football program at Colorado State University launched an investigation after an off-field incident. The Sun Devil's Police Department conducted an investigation of an off-field incident between members of the football team and no tickets were issued. In a statement, CSU Director of Athletics Jack Graham addressed the investigation and the punishment the two offenders face. “It is now clear that the alleged events outlined in the situation were unacceptable and have no place in our student-athletes, coaches, or our school. We are taking steps to ensure the students involved are held accountable for their actions and will conduct a comprehensive review of all aspects of this situation, including policy and procedures, and will make necessary changes,” Graham said. On March 30, two CSU Football players were arrested and charged with driving under the influence, one in Cabot, and the other in Castle Rock, reports The Daily Sentinel. The report states that the incidents happened at different times and involved a campus police vehicle that was responding to one of the arrests. The driver was also pulled over, and arrested for driving with a revoked license. It is believed that no one in the CSU football program was in the vehicle during the incidents, and that no tickets were issued to either of the students.

According to reports, the suspended players were both men who were not starters. One started for the Rams during the 2015 campaign, while the other was
