A: Your CPU is shared by the tasks on the web page you are currently viewing. If you have web pages on your computer that you use often, it's a good idea to consider disabling automatic updates, so you don't have to worry about these issues. As a developer, your high performance mode (or, lack thereof) doesn't have anything to do with the performance of the websites your users visit. That has to do with the performance of the website you have written, not the performance of your computer. The present invention relates to a novel process for the production of biodiesel fuel
