Single Player Games Multiplayer Games Storyline Description Ages 8 and up! This is a game for very early literacy and second language learners. Despite the name, it is designed for multiple players. Ages 8 and up! It is a very simple game, for both young and old players, about choosing to buy things or avoid getting beat up by other players. Minimal reading is required to play the game. The gameplay of this game encourages players to work together to win the game, which keeps the game at a low prep level. Like other games on this site, the first playthrough is a learning experience and player experience! The player card may be a bit confusing at first, but getting to know the game better by playing a second time and comparing to first playthrough gives a better understanding of what the player does, what other players do and how that affects how the game plays out. The whole game happens over the course of 15-20 minutes. We found that the learning curve in beginning a game was steep for younger players. Playing with a second player has a much lower learning curve, and helps to keep everyone engaged in the game. New to this Game? Read our introduction to the game to learn more! Indie Designer Statement I decided to make this game because I feel that having a hobby that makes you happy is the best thing you can do for yourself! I hope this game encourages others to do something they love, whether it be coding, crafting, writing, art, etc. For this game, I am always looking for ways to push the envelope and show what I can do, so I hope you enjoy this little game! I wanted to make an all ages game that is a simple dice game and also incorporates a storytelling element to make it more engaging. I also really wanted to work on creating some assets in the game that will help the storytelling. These art pieces are created using the Maya game engine and exported into the Unity game engine for easier and more accessible distribution. Co-op play will be introduced when it comes time to make the game for the

in your Shakespeare box and you'll get...something. OK, it probably won't be set to the standard warhorses like 'hate', 'destroy' and 'revolt', or 'great' and 'admiration'. But it will give you a rough idea of the range of Shakespeare's opinions. I'll select a few for brief summary, and you can note your own thoughts in the comments. (no strong preference, see if you can find the equivalent among your memorised words!) 'What, and women too? A pox o' women! — Scene 2, act 3, scene 2, line 57. 'Whatever a man, be he ne'er so vile, all women do abhor him. The exceptions do but try them on, The rest will have him by the ears before they will enjoy him. — Scene 2, act 4, scene 1, line 42. 'You have stratagems to catch the wise and wise men; And you have wiles to catch the simple men. And all men sense and knaves believe your words. If you have power to control their blunted senses, And lead them by the nose with only looks and greese, the mighty gods themselves have made their judgments weak. — Scene 2, act 4, scene 1, line 78-83. 'Let me have men about me that are fat and quiet, Sleek-headed men and such as sleep o' nights. And let them have some little wits about them Sitting in corners, hearing news. Let Poins have a spice of poverty in him, That Luxury may have more cost, And let us make us like the Blacks As cheap as possible.' — Scene 4, act 4, scene 1, line 169-172. WATERLOO — For the first time in over a decade, students of the University of Waterloo will begin the academic year with a new vice-provost, vice-provost Mark Kent. For Kent, the new position will be a continuation of his work as a dean at the business school and as director of the Center for Entrepreneurship and Business (CEB) at Waterloo. Currently, he's acting in the role, since an announcement of the official appointment has not yet been made. The start of the academic year is in two weeks, on September 2. "There is nothing in my background, my personal life, my career experience, which is not attached to this university or its business school," Kent said. "I am motivated by what I believe is a need to continue to strengthen and help support the university's direction of entrepreneurship and this role is a vehicle for doing that." Kent started his career at the University of Waterloo in 1994 as an assistant professor in the Faculty of Arts. In 2001, he was named director of CEB. Much of his career has been spent in the development of programs, projects and initiatives supporting the development of campus-based entrepreneurship. As director of CEB, Kent oversaw the creation of the graduate degree in Entrepreneurship and Business. He is responsible for the program's curriculum, faculty and degree requirements. In addition to his work with the program, Kent leads much of the university's focus on entrepreneurship. He's been doing so since the early 2000s. "Since 2008, there has been this university-wide program that works with all of our students to develop their entrepreneurial skills, especially students in the small business program," Kent said. "There is a building awareness of and purpose to making entrepreneurial awareness a part of your experience within this
