One of the best Shadow of the Colossus game ever created. Shamefully, it's being discontinued. Wal-Mart Game wasn't very good. Game Informer The whole game plays like a far-off cousin of Shattered Galaxy, and the pacing could use some work. Other Reviews "The Vale: Shadow of the Crown" is a stealth game, and one of the best stealth games ever made. The storyline is a retro-western pulp fantasy-novel that could go either way. It can only go one way, though, and it's the right way.

Though obviously I'm biased, I think that The Vale is perhaps the most adventurous, original game available. Update 2/28/05: I received a response from the company and they said "The Vale: Shadow of the Crown will be available for download at a later date." No future dates given, though, so it's being delayed. This isn't the first time the game has been delayed. The new release date should be March 21, 2005. I find it hard to believe that someone with Thief and Shadow Of The Colossus on their resume won't be able to see that this game is totally new and unique, and absolutely deserving of the Game Informer Award. I think it's also possible that the game will get beaten to the death and not receive any awards, but I'm more than happy to see it on the best of the best list. In the West, most of us know about Shadow Of The Colossus, but virgin territory in the US/Canadian market is filled with gamers who either never heard about it or heard about it, learned of the Game Informer Award, and saw it and thought to themselves "Damn, that game shoulda' won Game Informer's Best Game of 2004." So what can be done to prevent that from happening? Simple: write reviews that don't sound anything like Game Informer's. And more importantly, write reviews that don't sound anything like The Game Informer reviewer's. This review should illustrate some of the things that can make the writer sound like Game Informer. 1) Complaining about game art. This is actually an easy one to spot. It's also a classic mantra of game reviewers. "This game is so ugly" or "This game has bad animation." This reviewer does a good

: Favorite Mold Remediation Products Home mold, and allergies to mold can be a nightmare if not treated now. Wait too long, and you may end up with significant damage. Unfortunately, a room's cumulative pollutants can worsen over time, making them as significant or more important than what was present the last time the area was cleaned. The general rule of thumb is, if you could see your breath while dusting, then do clean up. It doesn't take a lot of time or money to identify the problem. But, if you don't fix it, then you will most likely have to get multiple expensive fixes which can be more damaging than what you started with. The time, money and effort will likely be better spent on remediation. Here are some of my go-to products.

House Ph Azine-Lite House Ph Azine-Lite is an all natural liniment for many surfaces, including wood, hardwood, laminate, tile, soft carpeting, and other flooring. This prevents mildew, fungus or other microbial organisms on the surface of the material. For hard surfaces, House Ph Azine-Lite provides primary, secondary and final cleaning; and for carpet, this product will work for primary and secondary cleanings.

Baume's Glued Block Remover This product is a primary cleaner for wood, tile, laminate and hardwood floors, but it's important to note that it removes most kinds of glue from whatever surface it comes in contact with. The manufacturer at Baume's lists it as an effective glue stripper for the most part. Well, the manufacturer at Baume's gets an 'A-for-effort' from me. I've used Baume's Glued Block Remover to remove cement stains from porcelain counter tops, and it has been effective. It also applies with ease, and it gets the job done.

Varo's Touch Up Compound If you could tell me the name of a product that I could apply for what my house needs, then that would be Varo's Touch Up Compound. They have created a product specifically for cleaning algae and mildew stains from a variety of surfaces. It can be used on hard surfaces such as tile, plastic, glass, marble, glass, stone, porcelain, clay, stone, granite, quartz, masonry, Fibrinogen and plasma and granulocyte fibrinogenases: production and properties of a thrombin-mediated glycoprotein fibrinogenase from human (seemingly) normal leukocytes. A latent thrombin-mediated protease [labelled (a) in Figure 1] active at acidic pH, has been isolated from human (seemingly) normal leukocytes and characterized (see text). The (a) protease degrades its substrate, fibrinogen, with second order rate constants of $14.7 \times 10^{-4}/\text{min. cm}^2$ at pH 7.0 at 37 degrees C, accounting for the 22 residue alpha2-chain; as determined by using a P50 of 80 microM for calcium-activated thrombin. (a) is inhibited competitively by D-phenylalanyl-L-prolyl-L-arginine amide pepstatin ($K_i = 100 \text{ nM}$) and by other serine protease inhibitors, indicating the classical serine catalytic mechanism. The enzyme appears to be a fibrinogenase of the transglutaminase type, because it is activated over a broad range of low-molecular-weight activating cofactors (e.g. Ca^+ , Mg^{2+} , Zn^{2+} , Mn^{2+} ,
