The auto-clicker is a tool that enables the user to perform auto-click tasks with a specified delay. The auto-clicker can be used by players who are playing a game and can be easily used by casual users. The auto-clicker saves you the trouble of doing numerous clicks in the game and can be used for the development of applications that require numerous clicks. The auto-clicker allows you to setup time intervals for clicks, repetitions, and resume actions. It also allows you to set a sound file to be played when the trigger occurs. The auto-typer tool is an abbreviation for the auto-clicker. It enables the user to type the same text over and over again. Like the auto-clicker, the auto-typer allows you to setup time intervals for repetitions, and resume actions. You can also set the sound file to be played when a trigger occurs. The webcam capture tool enables you to capture a webcam image and save the captured image to a file. The image captured by the webcam tool can be used for many purposes including for photos and frames of images that appear in places where many items are present. The audio player allows you to upload any sound files to the tool. You can then play the sound files. The audio files can be uploaded in a variety of formats like wav, wma, mp3, mp4, m4a, ogg and so on. The webcam capture tool enables you to capture a webcam image and save the captured image to a file. The image captured by the webcam tool can be used for many purposes including for photos and frames of images that appear in places where many items are present. More recently the Autoclicks has been used to work around certain Microsoft 360 games. Where each MS 360 game requires a user to click on a "Start" button whenever the game is turned on. The Autoclicks can be easily set to play the sound file of "Start". This works without requiring a user to physically click the "Start" button over and over again. The 360 Auto Clicker had a lot of features, but there were a few features we did not include. For instance, you could select a directory that contains a batch file with settings for the auto clicker. This batch file could be started from the Autoclicks launcher shortcut itself to initiate the clicker. Auto Clicker 2.0 aa67ecbc25
