But it's growing As the evening news shows us footage of neo-Nazis and their supporters burning, looting, attacking and committing other acts of violence in the streets of Charlottesville, Virginia, it is easy to forget that the neo-Nazi movement is just as old as the KKK. The irony that there is new-Nazi violence in the US comes from only two months ago when the neo-Nazi, neo-Confederate movement organized a rally in Charlottesville, Virginia to protest the removal of a statue of the Confederate general Robert E Lee. The result was that 20-year-old Ryan Sarver drove his car through the crowd, injuring many and killing Heather Heyer. Many Americans have since been shocked at the violent destruction of a city and the brutality that

Among the many groups that came to the aid of the neo-Nazis was antifa, a secretive, violent group that proclaims itself “anti-fascist.” (The term “antifa” is derived from anti-fascisti, the Italian name for the far-left) It is ironic that now antifa are being celebrated as heroes. This is not due to any newfound respect for those in the violent neo-Nazi movement. Their brutality is well known, and they are a major a threat to peace in American society. However, there is irony in the growing popularity of antifa. As those who have followed the news may have
