In the following example, we are using the `*` to represent the next character in the Pattern String.

[source,java] ---- public class FindRegex extends JavaFXApplication { @Override public void start(Stage stage) { //String Text String Text = "Happy new year to all"; //Pattern String Pattern p =
Pattern.compile("new year to all"); //Matcher Matcher m = p.matcher(Text); //List Matchers =

m.matches(); List Matchers = m.findAll(); //System.out.println("Text : " + Text); System.out.println("Matches : " + m.groupCount()); System.out.println("Matches String : " + p.pattern()); System.out.println("Matches String Pattern : " + m.pattern()); //System.out.println(Matchers); //Print the matched strings. for (String s : Matchers) {
//System.out.println("[+] MATCH : " + s); System.out.println(p.matcher(Text).replaceAll(" ", "")); } //System.out.println("Type the to search"); Scanner scanner = new Scanner(System.in); String searchStr = scanner.next(); System.out.println("Start match search from : " + searchStr); //First find all the required matches.

[PLS READ All] (Sumber : to download this file, Please Right Click or Ctrl+Click then Save Link As). I think I get why that's happening in Chrome, but not in Firefox. If the 'tallyerp9bookingujaratipdffreedownload.exe' file doesn't exist, won't it get the next higher number in the 'tallyerp9bookingujaratipdffreedownload.rsp' file? In the case of Chrome, the number is 'tallyerp9bookingujaratipdffreedownload.rsp?ILQ_SDLQ_' so in the place of the string 'tallyerp9bookingujaratipdffreedownload' where there's not an exe file, it should just look at the next higher number in the list, so it would look for tallyerp9bookingujaratipdffreedownload.rsp?ILQ_SDLQ_1, and then back again, tallyerp9bookingujaratipdffreedownload.rsp?ILQ_SDLQ_3, and so on. But when I look at the flow in Firefox, it just goes directly from the first number in the list, tallyerp9bookingujaratipdffreedownload.rsp?ILQ_SDLQ_1, to the last number in the list, tallyerp9bookingujaratipdffreedownload.rsp?ILQ_SDLQ_2, and then it's done. And yes, my OCD caused me to look at lines 582-563 of tallyerp9bookingujaratipdffreedownload.rsp. Yes, I have to really look at those lines to know what's going on. And yes, I can't unsee those lines. A: Firefox doesn't obey HTTP redirects. You can say Firefox to try to follow redirects via the `about:config` browser menu. However, there is no
