Field of the Invention The present invention relates to a gate driving circuit, a display device and a method of manufacturing the same. More particularly, the present invention relates to a gate driving circuit capable of stably operating a display device, a display device using the gate driving circuit, and a method of manufacturing the same. 2. Description of the Related Art In recent years, display devices such as liquid crystal display (LCD) devices have become increasingly thinner and lighter. This is because display devices are widely used as multimedia devices, not only in televisions, personal computers (PCs) and the like, but also in mobile devices. In this light, an active matrix type display device which is driven by an active element such as a thin film transistor (TFT) has been developed. The active matrix type display device includes a plurality of source signal lines and gate signal lines intersecting each other, a plurality of pixels in regions at the intersections of the source signal lines and the gate signal lines, and a plurality of TFTs provided in each of the pixels. In each of the pixels, a source signal line driving circuit drives a source signal line connected to the source signal line. A gate signal line driving circuit drives a gate signal line connected to the gate signal line. A source signal line driving circuit and a gate signal line driving circuit include a plurality of gate driving circuits (or gate driving circuits) for driving gate signal lines corresponding to a plurality of display areas of the pixels, respectively. In such a gate driving circuit, a timing controller outputs the gate pulse signals (or gate signals) which control the on/off of the gate signal lines. An example of a conventional gate driving circuit is shown in FIG. 1. FIG. 1 is a block diagram of a conventional gate driving circuit. The gate driving circuit shown in FIG. 1 includes a shift register stage 3 which outputs a plurality of gate pulse signals GP_1 to GP_N in response to an output clock signal CLK input from a timing controller (not shown in the drawing). In this case, the gate pulse signals GP_1 to GP_N are output

A: It looks like some kind of build script was attempting to download some kind of library. The script was failing, because the CRLF characters in the file names are unexpected in standard Linux applications. The script was able to download the gZip file, but ran into problems trying to decompress it. Maybe some filesystem library failed to read the file, or it was corrupted. The gZip file was found in /home/robert/.cache/Geo5/all-patch-Jan-18.zip, and the unzip script was able to extract the files to the current directory. So the problem was solved by cleaning out the cache directory.

![\$1/\sqrt{\epsilon\_{\rm max}}]\$ for the velocity (black dotted) and pressure (red dashed) component, as a function of the domain size. Increasing  $d$  reduces the effective Reynolds number. b) The envelope of the spectra of the two components on a log-log scale, as a function of  $\epsilon_{\rm max}$ . The same color conventions apply as in a).  We finally point out that, in the limit  $d \rightarrow 0$ , the numerical results approach a stationary solution for which  $U^S$  and  $V^S$  are approximately constant. In that sense, the results for  $d=0.1$  are very similar to those for  $d=0.01$ , where the signals are transient. Note that this is not the case for the pressure as for the flow velocity. Conclusion ===== We have introduced a new numerical scheme that allows one to capture the temporal evolution of the unclosed terms in Euler's equations in a temporally consistent manner. To demonstrate the abilities of the method, we have studied two situations in a channel flow. The first one corresponds to a channel flow with an upstream recirculating flow in the transverse direction. In this case we have found an accurate agreement between our simulation and the stationary solution, in the sense that the variance of the relative error is almost zero. We have moreover found that the transient signal is only a small perturbation of the stationary solution. As a second situation we have investigated the long term behavior of a channel flow with a moving obstacle. In this case, two different kinds of behavior are observed. In one case, the transient signal
